

San Francisco Bay - October 2010

Join your friends from CRSA in a week of sailing around San Francisco Bay. You'll see San Francisco from a new vantage point. Sailing in the bay is often very breezy and can be challenging. We'll move around to different points during the week staying and visiting several cities and towns. On October 10, we'll have an opportunity to see some of the Navy's great ships during the last day of "Fleet Week".

We'll plan to dock downtown in the marina district and take in some of the sights in "The City". We will plan to visit other areas that are near protected wetlands, national shoreline and bird sanctuaries.

October usually brings warmer clear weather as the Pacific High is dissipating. You should expect highs in the mid 70's and lows in the mid-50's. We plan on coordinating the trip with some of the renowned culinary spots around the bay. I hope you are able to join us this coming October on this exciting adventure in one of the most desirable places to sail on the continent.
